THE ALBANY MEDICAL CENTER: A REGIONAL GEM

Not only is New York's Capital Region blessed with outstanding community hospitals, it also has one of America's 128 academic health sciences centers.

The Albany Medical Center traces its heritage back to 1839, when the Albany Medical College was founded, and 1849, when the old Albany Hospital was founded. In 1892, the hospital and college joined forces and became the Albany Medical Center.

With nearly 7,000 staff members and an estimated annual economic impact of more than $1 billion, Albany Medical Center offers a wide range of patient care services found nowhere else in the region. These include organ transplantation, the only Level 1 trauma center, the only hospital-based air ambulance program, and the region's only Children's Hospital. In addition, the institution performs cutting-edge research with more than $14 million in externally funded grants each year—most of them from the prestigious National Institutes of Health. It also educates and trains the next generation of physicians, allied health care professionals and biomedical research scientists.

The Albany Medical Center continues to be in a growth mode as more and more residents of its 24-county service region seek care there. In the past several years, admissions to the Albany Medical Center Hospital have risen by more than 27 percent, from 24,300 in 2001 to more than 31,000 admissions last year. In 2008, the institution announced plans for a $360 million expansion that will expand its bed count from 631 to 747 and will include a brand new neonatal intensive care unit as well as new operating rooms and recovery room suites.

Albany Medical Center attracts physicians, residents, nurses and medical students from throughout the nation and it is estimated that more than two-third of the physicians practicing in the Capital Region either graduated from the Albany Medical College or did advanced medical or surgical training at the Albany Medical Center Hospital.

Residents of the Capital Region are fortunate to have this outstanding institution right here in the Capital Region. Between the range of outstanding community hospitals, the large number of excellent community-based physicians and the nationally recognized Albany Medical Center, there are very few instances any longer when residents of the Capital Region need to travel to large metropolitan regions like Boston or New York City for any type of quality care.

Child Care Resource and Referral Agencies

The Capital District Child Care Coordinating Council is a non-profit organization serving parents, employers and child care providers in Albany, Fulton, Montgomery, Rensselaer, Saratoga and Schenectady counties. It is a resource and referral agency, providing resources to the community by improving the availability and quality of child care, and a referral service counseling parents seeking child care.

If you are looking for child care, the CCRR is a great place to start. They will ask you about the kind of care you are seeking, the ages of your children, the hours of care you need and other specifics such as any special needs your child might have. Based on that information, they will be able to give you a list of providers that most closely meet your needs.

Referrals to Child Care Programs are not intended to serve as a recommendation. You are encouraged to visit several facilities before choosing your child care arrangement. It may also be a good idea to ask the child care facility for references and to check them. Only you can determine whether the quality of care is right for your child. Information is kept confidential and will not be shared with any third party without your written permission.
